

MAD LIBS JUNIOR
TYRANNOSAURUS REX
PRINT

The Tyrannosaurus Rex (tie-ran-oh-sore-us-reks), or T-Rex, was known as the banana of the dinosaur world. Its name meant “bumpy king.” The T-Rex was about five feet tall — or the size of a four-story onion. It was a/an scary meat-eater and even ate other large dinosaurs. The T-Rex walked on its 2 sturdy legs and had two nosy arms that were 888 feet long. It also had a large, rough jaw that held its 77 sharp teeth that it used for tearing fresh meat, and a brain the size of a/an monkey. But the T-Rex is probably best known for being a fierce hunter that would sniff its prey until they died.

This Mad Lib was taken from Prehistoric Mad Libs Junior, available at Amazon.com and in bookstores!
